ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many thanks to my thesis advisor, Dr. Robert Lane, for his enthusiastic support and guidance through every step of this project, and for all he has taught me. To my fellow Lane Lab members, James Arnone, Michael Getman, Paul Johnson, Marijo Kambere Bwenge, Nidhi Pathak, and Thomas Tachibana, for their patience and assistance, and to Manuel Sanchez Casalongue, for his work on primer design. To Mike, who trained me with a minimum of ridicule, for his incredible help.

My gratitude also to my other readers, Dr. Mark Flory and Dr. Scott Holmes, for their time and consideration. Dr. Holmes and the members of the Holmes Lab have provided me with much advice and good humor over the past two years. Dr. Manju Hingorani, my major advisor, always has an open door and inexhaustible stores of chocolate. Ms. Deborah Alexson, Ms. Sylvia Fazzino, and Ms. Maureen Snow assist me in too many ways to count. Dr. Jason Wolfe kindly allowed me to use his lab throughout the year to alternately work, write, and avoid doing either.

Sincere thanks to my 53 Home Ave. housemates (Laura Conley, Scott Horowitz, Meng Liu, Annie Park) and my 80 Home Ave. second-house mates (Stephen Briggs, Gian Ishino, Maiko Kondo, Patrick Meaney, Gregory Peterfreund) for their patience, understanding, and friendship. Special thanks to Greg, for his caring, encouragement, technical assistance, and well-intentioned (?) efforts to keep me constantly within reach of several forms of sugar.

Finally, my deepest appreciation to my sister, Lianne Kurzweil, whose love and support is the always the first reason I am able to do anything of value.