Thank you:
to you for coming and reading this.
to the performers who were very encouraging and enthusiastic sources of help and music.
to my advisor Paula Matthiesen for positivity and almonds and MUSC109.
to all the professors in the incredible music department, even those with whom I’ve never taken a class.
to Sandy Brough and Deb Shore for gently administering my education.
to the composition graduate students for their constant support and mentorship, and especially to Matt Wellins for being an endless resource for helping me figure out how computers and sound work.
to everyone who lent equipment.
to my housemates for being incredible friends and tolerant listeners.
to my parents for accepting me even though I won’t make any money after college.

Thank you to God.
